Whisky Buried Deep in the Bay

How Canadian Smugglers Cashed Wholesale Quantities of "Booze."

BROUGHT FROM VANCOUVER

Arrests in Seattle Cause Breakup of Big Ring—Trips Between Seattle and Vancouver Were Made Under Cover of Darkness.

Seattle, Wash.—Watery depths of Elliott bay formed the hiding place in which a liquor smuggling ring cached wholesale quantities of Canadian whisky brought by boat from Vancouver prior to the arrest of four of its members, according to disclosures made by Lieut. E. C. Collier, head of the police dry squad, says a recent issue of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Lieutenant Collier made public the information regarding the ring following the sentencing of two of its members in federal court and the failure of the launch operated by the gang to arrive at its customary place in keeping with the schedule planned previous to the arrest of the four members of the ring.

Gus Hanson, licensed mariner, and John Morris, a deck hand, were sentenced to serve 90 days in the county jail and pay a fine of $200 by Judge Jeremiah Neterer when they pleaded guilty to transporting liquor. The charges against them were the first in this district to be filed directly under the authority of the new federal prohibition law. Bert Jackson and John Olson, laborers, were arrested at the same time Hanson and Morris were taken and are still held in the city jail.

The arrest of the quartette took place at the base of a 200-foot cliff on Magnolia bluff while the men were taking the last 180 quarts of Canadian whisky out of the water preparatory to carrying it to the top of the cliff above and storing it in a thicket less than forty yards off Magnolia boulevard near the southern end of Thirty-seventh avenue west.

A member of the dry squad had purchased the amount in question by making an initial payment with marked money, when he was joined by his fellow squad members, and the four men arrested. The launch that had brought the whisky from Vancouver was scheduled to return with another load some time between midnight and daylight. In the morning dry squad officers waited in vain for its arrival at the customary point off Magnolia bluff.

According to the plan of operation as gathered by Lieutenant Collier, the ring was composed of about seven men, three of them thoroughly versed in navigation and particularly acquainted with sound waters. Trips between Seattle and Vancouver were made entirely under the cover of darkness, the boat taking its load at a scheduled spot near Vancouver and unloading it into the bay off Magnolia bluff.

Each sack was tied to a small cord and lowered to the bottom of the bay, the cords being tied together on an iron bar and the bar placed under shallow water near the shore. The sacks containing the whisky seized by the dry squad were still wringing wet when found, while a maze of cords was discovered near the water's edge where they had been discarded.

The path up the side of the cliff showed that the place had been used for some time, apparently for the purpose of bringing up whisky.

Modern Life Is the Cause of Ills

Brings About Innumerable Necessities for Adjustment in Individual.

MANY CURED DURING WAR

Medical Expert on the Psychoses and Neuroses Developed in Struggle—Chronic Worry Relieved After Real Reason Is Found.

New York.—Fear and anxiety, twin demons that make miserable so many lives, have their origin in inward conflict and can only be conquered by tracing the trouble to its source, says Dr. Frankwood E. Williams, associate medical director of the national committee for mental hygiene, in the current number of Mental Hygiene.

Complex community life brings about innumerable necessities for adjustment in the individual, and failure to make these adjustments with a measurable degree of success is often responsible for so-called mental or nervous ills, technically termed psychoses or neuroses, according to Doctor Williams, who uses illustrations from the recent war to make this point clear.

During the war many men, finding themselves in apparently intolerable positions, sought unconscious refuge in mental or nervous breakdowns. By tracing the history of the conflict so terminating the greater percentage of the men might have been sent back to their commands completely restored and ready to face whatever might come. In fact, Doctor Williams says, many men of this type did recover completely with the aid of rest and proper psychiatric treatment, and fought bravely.

The measure of a man's success in handling life's problems, according to the article, lies in his skill in adjusting himself to the complicated life of modern society. Some fall completely, developing psychoses of a more or less serious nature, others are partly successful, but the difficulties of adjustment set up nervous disturbances that render them neurotic, while the majority succeed in making their adjustments without too great difficulty.

Relieving Chronic Worry. Even among those who are apparently successful, however, thousands are found who are annoyed by anxiety, who are "chronic worriers," and whose uneasiness arises from an inner conflict which may be got at by the use of proper methods and relieved. Doctor Williams says there may be obvious reasons for anxiety or fear, and that these should not be overlooked, but that often the real reason lies deep and must be carefully sought after before relief can come.

It is in these cases that the psychiatrist finds his deepest interest and his greatest chance to help. "Where the reaction is out of all proportion to a reasonably assignable cause, or where no reasonable cause may be found, then expert guidance and help are needed," says Doctor Williams, citing instances of persons afraid to ride in the subway, fearful of being alone, in comfortable, happy surroundings and worrying, and crying without apparent cause.

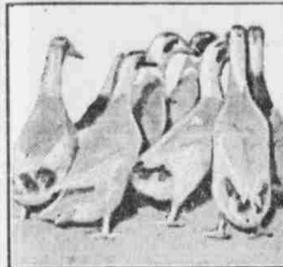

A bar in the harbor of Tampico is especially dangerous to navigation.

POULTRY FACTS

PRODUCTION OF DUCKS' EGGS

Demand at Good Prices is Limited Except Around Easter—Indian Runner is Favored.

The demand for ducks' eggs at a good price is limited and not nearly as general as the demand for hens' eggs. The quality of the Southern and Western duck eggs on the average market was poor until people began to keep Indian Runner ducks and to build up a trade in first-class eggs. A good demand for ducks' eggs exists about Easter time at prices usually several cents a dozen higher than for hens' eggs. Most buyers make no quotations for ducks' eggs except early in the spring. Since three ducks' eggs weigh about the same as four hens' eggs, ducks are not as profitable for the production of market eggs as fowls, unless a higher price is secured for the ducks' eggs.

Indian Runner Ducklings.

A trade is gradually being established in some markets for fancy near-by ducks' eggs, which bring higher prices than hens' eggs, and the demand seems to be increasing. Pure white eggs are preferred and usually bring the highest price. These eggs should be marketed frequently, as they depreciate in quality more rapidly than hens' eggs, especially during hot weather. The market for eggs should be carefully investigated by those who intend to raise breeds of the egg-laying type of ducks, such as the Indian Runner, especially for the production of eggs, say poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

PROVIDE FOWLS CLEAN FEED

Carelessness on Part of Poultryman in Cleaning Utensils Will Cause Much Trouble.

Fowls that are fed grain are pretty sure to receive pure feed, as all one has to watch is to make sure the grains are sweet and clean, and not moldy or decayed. However, it is seldom advisable to make grain the sole ration of the poultry.

Soft feeds (or mashes) will have to be fed to some extent and troughs must be used for this kind of feed. Where the residue is left to sour, the fowls will show the effects in time. Fermented feeds do not appear to be readily digested by poultry and may also spread disease germs.

Carelessness in the matter of cleaning the troughs has brought disaster to many a poultryman. The same thing is true of the drinking vessels. It requires only a little effort to have the feeding and watering vessels always clean, and it certainly is the thing to do.

PLENTY OF RANGE ESSENTIAL

Discouraging Results Have Come From Attempting to Raise Turkeys Under Confinement.

Given plenty of range, turkeys will rustle for grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetation, weed and grass seed, waste grain, waste nuts, and convert them into delicious meat at a minimum expense. Plenty of range is essential to success in turkey raising, and usually the discouraging results have come from attempts to raise the fowls under close confinement.

Be sure chicks do not become crowded.

Ship or deliver eggs twice or three times weekly.

Market white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs in separate packages.

Overgrown fowls are no better in any particular than those of normal size.

Cull the flock so as to eliminate the early molder and other unprofitable producers.

The important thing in getting started in turkey raising is to be careful to get healthy stock.

Uniform poultry products command the best prices. Pure-bred fowls produce uniform products.

When selling eggs to the country merchant or cash buyer, insist that the transaction be on a quality basis.

Don't Let Catarrh Drag You into Consumption

Avoid Its Dangerous Stage.

There is a more serious stage of Catarrh than the annoyance caused by the stopped-up air passages, and the hawking and spitting and other distasteful features. The real danger comes from the tendency of the disease to continue its course downward until the lungs become affected, and then dreaded consumption is on your path. Your own experience has taught you that the disease cannot be cured by sprays, inhalers, jellies and other local applications. S. S. S. has proven a most satisfactory remedy for Catarrh because it goes direct to its source, and tends to remove the germs of the disease from the blood. The ex-buck was back at his old pre-war trade, in which the tools consisted of a pocket flashlight and black silk handkerchief. Inside the darkened house all was silent, save for the heavy breathing of the man who lay asleep on the bed.

The burglar gathered up his spoils—watch, money and a few odds and ends of more or less value—and turned to make his departure. Then, obeying an impulse, he turned the light on the man in the bed and let it creep up until it reached the face.

"My God!" he gasped. "My old top sergeant!"

Keeping Candy Pure

Agricultural Department Tries to Protect Public.

Must Carry Label That Tells the Truth, Manufacturers Are Told.

Candy in interstate commerce, the United States department of agriculture tells the manufacturers, must be pure, and must carry a label that tells the truth. The box or container that goes to the consumer should bear a conspicuous label showing the net weight. When the candy is put up under the name of the wholesaler or jobber, the name appearing on the label should be preceded by "manufactured for" or some such words, so that the purchaser may know that the name is not that of the manufacturer. Mixed candies labeled "fruit flavors" are unbranded if any artificial fruit flavors are used. The word "maple" or even the picture of a maple leaf must not appear on the label of confections in which no maple sugar or sirup is used. A false or misleading statement appearing on the label is not cured by a correct statement somewhere else on the label.

On the question of purity, harmless colors that do not conceal inferiority are permitted. The use of shellac and other gums for coating is prohibited. The department holds that saccharin is injurious to health and its use in candy is prohibited. Talc, terra alba, barytes, chrome yellow, alcohol, narcotic drugs and mineral substances of all kinds are specifically forbidden in confectionery by the terms of the law. The use of cocoa dust in the manufacture of chocolate goods is held to be objectionable. A harmless mineral oil may be used as a slab dressing if used in such way that little or none of the oil is incorporated in the finished candy. Any of the decisions or opinions relating to the application of the federal food and drugs act to confectionery may be obtained upon request from the bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture.

To Tear Down Haunted House.

Pineville, W. Va.—Ghosts, spooks and spirits will have to find a new playground, for the famous haunted house at Harman, near here, is to be torn down. The place has been occupied for only short periods for more than 25 years, even though the owner offered it rent free. The few families that did occupy the house left in terror with tales of the mysterious walking of chairs and tables, door rattings, rattling of dishes and pans and the removal of covers from persons occupying beds.
